

Product Manager – East Coast Based with National Responsibility

HARDI Australia is a major player across all segments of the Australian and New Zealand crop protection equipment market.

HARDI is currently searching for an experienced, energetic and proven Product Manager to join its dedicated Sales team.

The role entails strategic responsibility for the day to day management of a specific portfolio of products. Duties include developing a strategic plan for the product portfolio to ensure commercial objectives are met. The position will also carry responsibility for liaison with our European factories as required.

Candidates will ideally have experience in selling and marketing crop protection equipment in a B2B environment. Experience working within the Australian agricultural machinery sector would also be of considerable benefit. A tertiary qualification, preferably in agricultural environmental engineering would be highly regarded.

The ability to set and consistently meet stretch performance targets for their product portfolio is essential for this high -energy role.

The role also entails planning and coordination of shows and demonstrations.

If you have the experience we are seeking and wish to join a dynamic and growing global organisation, we would be very interested in hearing from you.

Written applications along with a current copy of your CV should be sent to
